"MONTANA THIS MORNING" LAUNCHES FALL SEASON SEPT. 19

MISSOULA --

"Montana This Morning," the Montana Committee for the Humanities' statewide series of morning television interviews, will kick off its fall season Monday, Sept. 19, with a new roster of engaging guests.

The University of Montana-based committee presents a wide range of Montana viewpoints through three-minute interview segments that are featured on CBS stations and affiliates throughout the state from 7:07 to 7:10 a.m. weekdays during "CBS This Morning."

Poet and teacher Sheryl Noethe will be featured Sept. 19-23, discussing poetry for the deaf and other topics. Noethe serves in Victor and Woodman schools as an MCH "Scholar in the Schools." Before moving to Montana, she taught for seven years at the New York School for the Deaf. She is the author of "Poetry Everywhere" and "The Descent of Heaven Over the Lake."

From Sept. 25-30, the series will focus on forests and forest fires. Orville Daniels, retired supervisor of the Lolo National Forest, will discuss nature's use of fire, human uses of forest resources, ecosystem management and the conflict over wilderness.

Upcoming "Montana This Morning" programs will feature state Senator-elect Vivian Brooke, discussing the recent world population conference, and historian Mary Murphy, an expert on Butte's past.

Produced and hosted by Glenda Wallace, "Montana This Morning" is a cooperative project
